Saint Thérèse of Lisieux lived in the late 19th century and Saint Francis of Assisi died in the early 13th century. Nevertheless, these two saints are among the most popular in the Catholic Church. One was a young Carmelite that was seemingly locked away from the world and the other was a worldly philanderer who gave up everything to follow Christ, living in radical poverty. Saint Thérèse, known as "The Little Flower," reminds us that even the most menial tasks, if done with great love, can be a way of serving God. Francis reminds us that when we have nothing in the world to distract us, we are better able to cling to God. This week, let us try in small ways to live the spirituality of Saint Thérèse and Saint Francis. May God bless you.
